"NATUREMAKER - The Art of

Dear Reader,

In an age of computers and video games, kids are missing out on one of life's simple pleasures—reading under a tree. NatureMaker Steel Art Trees bring library reading rooms alive, enticing children to enter the realm of storytelling and the magical world of books. Our individually handcrafted steel trees create imaginative environments where children can congregate—from libraries and schools to healthcare facilities like Tucson Medical Center with its walk-through fig tree in the children's wing. We welcome you to learn more about us, and if you're in New San Diego for the American Library Association show January 7-10, 2011, visit us at Booth 1901!

Glenview Public Library

Glenview Public Library, IL, recently opened in mid-October. NatureMaker created a transition walk through pocket forest of Oak, Maple and Birch. The wooded pathway between circulation and the children's reading room. Read more about this installation, click here.

Collingwood Public Library

Collingwood Public Library, Ontario, Canada. Two 11' tall Oak trees clad structural columns at the entrance to the children's reading room. The canopies of the two trees intersected in the middle, creating a naturalistic arbor/canopy that children passed through. Read more about this installation, click here.

BennettAbrams" is a collector's item for art and pop-up enthusiasts. > learn more
